To unlock the Internet, it uses a proxy to access the Web at certain sites. **Figure 16-2:** Free Basics gives people access to information for free. **Figure 16-3:** TinyPic.com is a free online photo editing site. Free Basics features • No advertisements • No censorship • No spying • No tracking • No encoding • No third party tracking • Paid content available for $0 * www.free-access.com/app/get/fbasics For a long time now, the Internet has been inundated with unfiltered garbage. Internet Service Providers (ISPs) — such as Time Warner, Comcast, and Verizon — have been profiting from businesses that purchase Internet access and resell it to the masses at a high price. With an ongoing decrease in the price of home Internet connections, Free Basics will help bring more people into the digital world. For the poor, free Internet access may seem like a great idea. However, Free Basics has a few issues. For starters, Free Basics providers don't offer any of the usual safeguards that ISPs have with their paid services, such as privacy policies, terms of service, and customer service. So it's easy for Free Basics to track users' data and even use it for their own ends. The site has a lot of control over content. It limits what an end user can view and what websites are available. While Free Basics is free, it still has to work within the confines of the Internet so it can't offer some of the services that a paid Internet connection offers. Free Basics also isn't available in all countries. For example, there are no Free Basics sites available in countries that filter or censor websites, such as Ethiopia or Laos. So if you're not a citizen of one of those countries, you can't have access to all the free information available on the World Wide Web. ## What Does the Internet Look Like? For the past decade or so, the Internet has been a tangled patchwork quilt of information and services. Although the official World Wide Web (www.w3.org) is a Web

It's going to be a tough one for the Washington Capitals tonight as they attempt to hold on to home ice in Game 6 against the St. Louis Blues. The Blues are by no means a pushover by any means, but you'd have to think it would be a little easier to get in front of these fans if you won Game 6 on the road. That's what the Capitals have attempted to do all series, and it seems like it's paid dividends for them. Washington's top goal scorer Evgeny Kuznetsov went through his usual routine of talking to the fans before and after the game, and a little common sense from Kuznetsov before the game goes a long way toward making it easier for players to get in front of the crowd. "Be respectful to them," Kuznetsov said. "They're paying money and want to come here, so you have to do good job. But once you start ... it's almost impossible to do." Video: Caps eliminated, begin offseason planning There is no reason for any player on the ice to do anything but respect the home fans, as Capitals coach Todd Reirden said after the game. "I think that is what is most important, and they are very appreciative of the environment," Reirden said. Despite the odds being against Washington, that environment is not what made them a team that could beat the Blues in seven games. The Capitals' experienced forwards and veterans made the difference in the series, and they will be sorely missed in the offseason. The fact that the Capitals have not eliminated themselves from the playoffs is going to be the biggest talking point, as was the game itself. Under normal circumstances, the Capitals would be back home for the series and looking forward to a Game 7, but those are certainly not normal circumstances. For the second time in three games, the Capitals found themselves on the wrong end of a 5-on-3 and they couldn't find a way to stop the Blues. "Anytime you get that through 2 minutes, you're going to beat us," Kuznetsov said. It's going to take a tremendous amount of character for the Capitals to bounce back in such an important Game 6, and there's no telling how the Blues will be for Game 6. On Thursday, Blues forward Brayden Schenn was asked if they were tired. "I don't know what

The NKT cell-related activatory CD1d glycoprotein CD1d1 undergoes chaperone-mediated quality control degradation. CD1d is a polymorphic protein that combines the functional domains of the major histocompatibility complex class I and class II molecules. We established that T cell populations express a CD1d chain that is generated by alternate splicing of the mRNA, resulting in CD1d1 and CD1d2 variants of different length and charge. CD1d1 is a soluble protein, whereas CD1d2 is incorporated into glycolipid-loading compartments of the antigen-presenting cell. We now show that CD1d1 undergoes chaperone-mediated quality control degradation by the proteasome, providing evidence for an important role of the proteasome in innate as well as adaptive immune responses.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a multi-rate video decoder and a method of decoding a multi-rate video which can support multiple video decoding rates, so as to improve performance of a video decoding device.

2. Description of the Related Art With the advent of high-capacity multimedia applications, such as MPEG-4 and H.264, multi-rate video decoders have emerged. A multi-rate video decoder is configured to handle video at a plurality of video decoding rates. For example, a multi-rate video decoder can decode video of two different video decoding rates such as MPEG-2 and MPEG-4. Therefore, many multi-rate video decoding devices require multi-rate video decoding. For example, a conventional multi-rate video decoder can decode video having two different video decoding rates such as MPEG-2 and MPEG-4, as illustrated in FIG. 1. In FIG. 1, a multi-rate video decoder 100 includes an MPEG-2 decoding unit 101, an MPEG-4 decoding unit 103, a video scaling unit 105, and a decoded video output unit 107. The MPEG-2 decoding unit 101 can process MPEG-2 video. The MPEG-2 decoding unit 101 decodes MPEG-2 video according to a reference video decoding rate. The video scaling unit 105 can perform a scaling operation of MPEG-2 video in MPEG-4 video decoding units 103. The MPEG-4 decoding unit 103 can process MPEG-4 video. The MPEG-4 decoding unit 103 decodes MPEG-4 video according to an MPEG-4 video decoding rate. The
