The "Elden Ring" refers to a powerful weapon used in the "Lands Between", a magical land that connects the mortal world and the world of myths. Elden Ring occurs once every hundred years; in the year of the gods it cannot be created by anyone other than the rightful king of the lands, and when it is created, it temporarily brings with it an unbreakable aura. The "Elden Ring" has been a symbol of royal power. For thousands of years the "Elden Ring" was only coveted by the powerful rulers of the lands; it was a symbol of power, status, and god-like aura. However, the more power accrued to the "Elden Ring", the more it began to attract a reckless and savage nature among its wielders. When the Elven King Ulgand was attacked by the Dark Elf Harkle, a noble in Ulgand's court, Ulgand's shield -the "Elden Ring"- is fused with Harkle's, giving him mastery over dark magic. Ulgand and his kingdom are overrun by dark elves and countless undead; and even his family members and closest companions are brutally murdered. A quest is necessary to restore peace to the land of the Elves. And so, the "Elden Ring" has been reclaimed by a new ruler, the valiant son of Ulgand; a light was born in the realm. That day, Ulgand's kingdom was reborn with the same power as the "Elden Ring" itself; only this time, the power of the kings and queens would be used for the good of their people. To this day, the "Elden Ring" is worn by rulers in the lands between, and the heritage of light continues to flow among the people of the lands. HOW IT WORKS

Players create and control their own characters and venture into a vast, open world. This is a fantasy RPG in which play is in a mythical yet dark world. There are no in-game elements to quantify one's strength, the more powerful ones are simply stronger than the others. However, your progression as a hero is based on the seasons, and each time the seasons change you become one

Elden Ring

On August 31, 2018, St. Andrews revealed special plans for the release of Shingeki no Kyojin: Armored Game Special (Requiem), the most recent addition to the Shingeki no Kyojin (Attack on Titan) smartphone game series. The game is a fantasy action RPG in which players can create and control their own character using an animated 3D model and move through three-dimensional environments as they fight alongside other players in the online multiplayer mode. The game's story takes place on a mysterious island in the Lands Between and players take turns to attack each other. The concept of the game is to create the protagonist as an adult version of his childhood self—a farmer's son who is transformed into a young adult. He then makes his way as a “Shingeki no Kyojin soldier” until he joins the military units and receives weapons from two hostile nations. The game is due out for Android and iOS via Google Play and the App Store in Japan on December 18, 2018. St. Andrews is also planning to release the game in Europe and America at a later date. Super Smash Bros. Ultimate in August 2018 Super Smash Bros. Ultimate will be released on the Nintendo Switch console this month in Japan. The game features playable characters from Super Smash Bros. Melee (more than 25 characters are playable in the game), Super Smash Bros. for Nintendo 3DS / Wii U, Super Smash Bros. for Nintendo Wii U / 3DS, and Super Smash Bros. for Nintendo 3DS / Wii U. The game will feature an online mode (Nintendo Switch Online) to communicate with other players, and will support the voice chat function of all of the console versions. The game is scheduled to be released on September 28 for Nintendo Switch worldwide, on October 3 for PS4 in Japan, and on September 4 for PC in North America. The new Komodo dragon recipe will be added to the game In addition to the previously announced Komodo dragon, new recipes have also been added to the game. These include a Leather Belt, a Gray Hat, a Black Suit, and the World Map. The map is specifically designed for those who want to gather data and track the locations of different items. In addition to the Komodo dragon, it can be used to monitor unique items such as the Lava Cannon. The map is designed for those who are looking for the data

Microsoft is hosting a major showcase at Gamescom. It's called the Xbox Gamescom Keynote, taking place August 5th, at 9 a.m. PT. And next week, visitors of Gamescom will have their chance to experience the event as well, with an event called GameSpot Live Presents Microsoft's Xbox One Kynthia on August 8th, Thursday. I went to the Konami event last weekend, so here is my general impressions and observations from the event. There were some interesting things, some stuff that was “meh”, and some things that seem like a “meh” plus more. Let’s jump in to my thought process while watching it, then let’s break that down in more detail: Konami’s Thoughts At the beginning, Konami’s Keynote talked about their vision with this new console, and how they will go after it and how the company values some of the foundations of their game business, which are things like content creation, expertise in genres, and customization. I’m sure a lot of that is legit and true, but it struck me as disingenuous, and sort of a false image of what they really intend. They seem to be trying to woo the audience that wants a familiar look and feel. I think a lot of people want more openness. I think a lot of people want an openness to non-traditional business models. I think many want more competition. I really wonder if they truly feel these things when in practice they’re trying to pull the gaming community along as they move past their current game business. There was talk about how they saw it in the future, with some things going forward and some things being cut from the timeline. It’s clear they’re working with tight time schedules

However, that's only a small piece of the pie — bigger utilities are using more fossil fuels to generate electricity. For example, Xcel Energy generated 43 percent of its electricity using natural gas last year, up from 36 percent in 2014. For perspective, Southern Co. generated 37 percent with natural gas. Those increases are happening because of the growing market for renewable energy in Colorado, where the federal government is requiring utilities to buy increasing amounts of energy from renewable sources, and to do so quickly. The report shows an increasing number of renewable energy power plants are being installed and that they're helping to cut greenhouse gases and reduce air pollution, all things that the Clean Air Act and EPA's power plant standards require. The growth can be seen in the number of wind turbines being installed. "The report reveals a surge in both wind and solar, helping to meet the energy demands of our growing economy," reports Suncor in a statement. Suncor is installing wind turbines at its Local utility of mammography screening in the second National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey. We assessed the potential consequences of changes in mammography screening criteria to characterize the population-based effects of screening in the second National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) in a survey of 5656 households, women aged 50-69 years were asked about prior screening mammography. Eligibility was based on 2 screening rounds: 1976-1979 (NHANES I) and 1982-1984 (NHANES II). Persons considered eligible for rescreening were at least 6 months post-last screening. Overall screening was 4.2%, with 85% screening within 5 years prior to NHANES I and 91% screening within 5 years prior to NHANES II. Among all eligible respondents, rescreening was made more likely in community with lower income, lower educational levels, and rural versus urban residence. Mammography screening is consistently carried out in a highly screened population. The feasibility of selective rescreening was demonstrated. Over time, the likelihood of screening increased, reflected by an increasing fraction of post-NHANES mammography screeners. _CHANNEL);
