Epson Printer Reset Utility Tx300f.rar Epson Printer Reset.Q: How can I check my Ubuntu installation disk in order to make sure that my BIOS is using the same bootable disk as my BIOS? I have tried booting Ubuntu from DVD/USB in both legacy and UEFI and both result in the same thing - as soon as the splash screen appears, nothing appears (The screen remains black). How can I check if my Ubuntu installation CD is the same as my BIOS boot disk? A: Create a file called /etc/grub.d/20_linux which will make sure that your installation disk is the first hard disk on the list. To do so: sudo nano /etc/grub.d/20_linux Edit the file and add a line to always boot from your installation disk. For example: menuentry "Ubuntu" { set root='hd0,msdos1' linux /boot/vmlinuz-3.11.0-15-generic.efi.signed.iso; initrd /boot/initrd.img-3.11.0-15-generic-signed.efi.signed; } Remember that this file will be used every time grub loads, so you must remember to make sure it is the same disk you want to boot from every time. Also, we are not meant to use EFI here. After you save, close and exit the file you can check if the disk is the same as in the file: grep ubuntu /etc/fstab You should be able to see an entry that resembles: LABEL=ubuntu /dev/sda1 ext2 0 0 If you do not see an entry there, you should probably try to use a different disk. Q: Is it bad to rinse a toilet
