Field of the Invention This invention relates to a liquid crystal displaying method and a manufacturing method of the same, and more particularly, to a liquid crystal displaying method that is capable of reducing operating voltage, decreasing power consumption, and raising production yield, and a manufacturing method of the same. 2. Description of the Prior Art Cathode ray tubes (CRT) have been developed to date in various types by research and development for applications including not only information and communication terminals, such as televisions and desktop computer monitors, but also the field of watch displays. As a result, demands for flat-panel displays having smaller size and lighter weight have increased in recent years. Accordingly, the research and development of the flat-panel displays has been accelerated. Liquid crystal displays (LCD) are most commonly employed as the flat-panel displays at the present time. Techniques for manufacturing a common-type LCD are well known, such as the techniques disclosed in U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,563,955, 5,640,475, and 6,967,667. The conventional LCD, however, has the following problems: 1. The operating voltage is high. 2. The power consumption is high. 3. The production yield is low. Therefore, it is an important subject to improve the performance of the conventional LCD and to reduce the manufacturing cost
