Bob Crane: The Cocktease (2009) known as La Guitarrita de Bob Crane en.Characterization of a calcium-dependent phosphorylating activity in eggs of the cricket, Gryllus assimilis. By photoaffinity labelling in the presence of excess calcium ions and radiolabelling in the absence of calcium, we demonstrate that an inositol-3-phosphate- and, to a minor extent, an inositol-3,4-bisphosphate-dependent enzyme is present in eggs of Gryllus assimilis. It is dephosphorylated by phosphatidylinositol 3-kinase in the absence of calcium, although the dephosphorylation is blocked at an early stage of the reaction in the presence of excess calcium ions. The Ca²⁺-dependent phosphorylation starts at the isomer level of inositol-1,4,5-trisphosphate and proceeds sequentially to the formation of 1-monophosphorylated inositol-1,4,5-trisphosphate, 1,3-cyclic inositol-1,4,5-trisphosphate, and 1-monophosphorylated 1,3-cyclic inositol-1,4,5-trisphosphate before the products are degraded. The Ca²⁺-dependent kinase has a molecular weight of 60-70 kDa and is not activated by protein kinase C in vitro. The activity of the enzyme from native and detergent-disrupted eggs is identical. Calcium-dependent inositol-1,3,4-trisphosphate formation is not detectable in the system. Thus a weak calcium-dependent activity can be demonstrated in eggs, which, in the presence of purified and concentrated lipids, is further increased by addition of purified and concentrated protein kinase C, which itself is quantitatively dephosphorylated by alkaline phosphatase. On this basis, the activity should be regarded as potentially genuine protein kinase C.Newborn screening for hypothyroidism and cystic fibrosis in the Italian national programme.
